2. RESPONSE

- (1) What is the main claim that the author(s) make(s)? What evidence can you show?
- (2) What are three pieces of evidence used by the author(s) to support this claim?
- (3) What do you think/feel/believe about the claims made by the author(s)? Are they valid? Important? Why (not)?
- (4) How does this text relate to another text used in this class (or in other courses/studies)? How are the authors of those two texts—not the texts themselves—interacting? (Consider whether they have compatible topics, direct references, common sources, shared theories/perspectives, etc.)
- (5) Considering the course objectives, what will you take from this reading as you move forward? Why is this significant toward your growth as a college writer?
- (6) What questions did this text prompt you to ask? List at least three that you think would make for interesting in-class conversation.
